Background Information

The United Nations Association of Australia WA Division is leading a process for preparing an entry (or entries) in The Global Challenges Prize 2017 conducted by the Global Challenges Foundation.

"The aim of the prize is to find models or frameworks for international cooperation, capable of addressing the interlinked risks and problems of climate change, other large-scale environmental damage, violent conflict (including nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction), extreme poverty, and expected continuing rapid population growth. The competition is not looking for blueprints for solving the individual issues in question, or to avert specific risks. Rather, entrants should focus on designing a decision-making structure or framework that could galvanize effective international action to tackle these risks. The proposed model may encompass an entirely new global framework or a proposed reform for existing systems. The prize competition is open to anyone - individuals, groups of individuals, universities, companies or associations - anywhere in the world. Every entry, however, requires one contact person for registration. Submissions should be no more than 9250 words. Entries can be submitted in English, Mandarin, Spanish, Russian, Arabic, and French. Multiple submissions are acceptable so long as they all address the prize's criteria." Source & further details at: <https://globalchallenges.org/en>
